THE TOUGH DEVIL DEMPSTER WILL HANG.

Negro Convicted of Murder in the First Degree and Will Hang as Soon as the Governor Says the Word.

Elmer Dempster, the nineteen-year-old black tough, who on the afternoon of July 23, entered the home of Samuel Pearce, in Washington county and deliberately murdered his whole family, has been tried and convicted of murder in the first degree, and will hang as soon as Governor Pennypacker says the word.

The trial was a mere form and Dempster was not even called upon to tell the horrible details of his crime. During the time the bereaved husband was on the stand, relating the awful visions that met his gaze when he returned from taking his sister to Canonsburg to the train Dempster sat gazing into space and unmoved.

When the evidence had all been heard Judge Taylor made a brief talk to the jury and in exactly seven minutes a verdict of murder in the first degree was returned. Dempster was taken back to his cell where he will remain until orders are given for his execution which according to the feeling of all familiar with the case should be as soon as possible.

WERE WEDDED IN YOUNGSTOWN

Two Well Known Young People of Webster Hied Themselves to Neighboring State and are United in Marriage.

The climax to an episode which would furnish material for a drama equal to Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet has just come to light in Webster and at present all eyes in the village are turned towards the footlights which now glimmer at the threshhold of a union which can be analized as genuine connubial bliss. The young hero can now look into the sparkling eyes of his wedded and won and with pleading articulation say, oh sharer of my joys and soother of my insuffer able sorrows, thou art mine own.

Miss Della Amann and Mr. Wm. Bainbridge are the happy young people, who taking no one into their confidence, boarded a train for Youngstown, Ohio, early Monday morning and returned home the same evening as man and wife. They left the impression that they were going to Pittsburg to see the ball game.

The bride who has been employed as saleslady at the Equitable Supply Co.'s store the past year asked the manager for a day off, Monday, but gave not the slightest intimation of her intentions. Although the couple have been sweethearts for some time even their parents did not believe that they were matrimonially inclined.

The bride is a charming young lady and quite popular among her associates and well liked by everybody. Mr. Bainbridge is also well and favorably known in and near Webster, and holds a responsible position there. The happy young couple will be tendered a reception at the bride's home Sunday and will go to housekeeping in Webster soon.

CONSTABLE FOUND GUILTY OF EXTORTION.

Took Bribes From Bawdy House Keeper and Fell into the Clutches of the Law.—Is Now at Mercy of the Court.

George A. Hockey, a constable of East Huntington township, was given a warm reception yesterday while on the witness stand in Judge Doty's court. Hockey was charged by Emma Greenleaf, a bawdy house proprietress near Scottdale, with extortion and the evidence brought out at the hearing was rather on the sensational order and the subsequent conviction of the custodian of the law will serve as a warning to other constables of the county that it is better at all times to be on the right.

It seems that Hockey had been grafting in connection with giving the woman "protection" to run her house and she finally fell into the clutches of the law and was taken to Greensburg and placed in jail to await the action of the Grand jury. During her stay in jail it seems the woman sent for Hockey but he failed to put in an appearance and according to her story on the witness stand, turned her down when she was in trouble. She then brought a charge against him for extortion.

She stated that on one occasion, Hockey made a little touch for the purpose, as he stated, of paying a small balance due on a merry-go-round which he had bought. Emma says she is after Hockey for the reason that when she was in jail and in trouble and sent for him, he failed to come and give her the protection for which she had paid. The prosecutrix occasioned some merriment in court when she stated that, on one occasion, "when she was lucky," she gave Hockey $20 all at once.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case and Hockey is now at the mercy of the court.

Joke on the Bride.

A young married woman in Belle Vernon borrowed a "setting hen" of a waggish neighbor. She placed a dozen eggs under the fowl and kept the bird tied down on the nest for a week, before her husband knew what was up. Then the little bride had a tearful time because it turned out that the "hen" was a rooster.

EMERY UNDER HOT FIRE

Castle and Swallow Turn Batteries On Fusion Nominee.

DAMAGING CHARGES ARE MADE

Sensational Allegations That Call For Emphatic Refutation From the Aspirant For Governor.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, September 4.

At the very outset of his campaign Lewis Emery, Jr., the Democratic-Lincolnite candidate for governor, has been put upon the defensive.

He has been subjected to a fierce fire from the batteries of the Prohibitionists, who twice turned him down when he sought the nomination of their party for governor

Homer L. Castle, who was ultimately named for governor by the Prohibitionists, and Dr. Silas C Swallow, the Prohibition state leader, have each made damaging and serious charges against Emery, to which he must make reply

In his speech of acceptance in Pittsburg, Mr. Castle, in referring to Emery, among other things said.

"It was utterly impossible for us to support Senator Emery for at least the following reasons:

"He is merely the representative of one discredited Republican machine which is seeking to dethrone another Republican machine, and so far as I can see the one machine is as bad as the other, either way you take it.

"In the courts of Philadelphia county, confirmed by the supreme court, Lewis Emery, Jr., trading as the Lewis Emery Oil company, has been found guilty of practicing such frauds in the stamping of oils, both on state officers and the public, as would shatter any man's faith in his business integrity

"He has never in all his life, until now, exhibited any antagonism to trusts and combines, except as a business rivat, and upon the contrary, by his own admission, he is a member of the Brewery trust, which is worse than the Beef or Oil trust, and he is the head of an oil trust which, if possible is worse in character, which lacks only opportunity to be as bad in practice as the Standard Oil company

"He is affiliated in a business way with Durham McNichol & Mack, whom he assumes to fight, and we have never yet been shown where these men paid one dollar for their stock or been told what was the consideration which passed then, in 1901, these political manipulators, then in the height of power, became interested in the Pure Oil company And we want to be told what relation this stock had to the New Jersey pipe line bill and the withdrawal of Standard Oil opposition.

"He has insulted the church. He has shown that he has no higher regard for her than he has for a brewery."

Called a Fake Reformer.

In addressing the Grangers at their Williams Grove picnic last week, Dr Swallow gave a review of the proceedings before the common pleas and supreme courts in the case against the Emery Oil company, and made these declarations:

"The contention of the Prohibitionists in this campaign is that having fought the Republican Machine for many years, and being still in the fight against it we are unwilling that there should be foisted onto the people of Pennsylvania as governor a fake reformer; a counterfeit; one whose reform is only to the furtherance of his own business interests; one who employs in his oil business the very methods he is condemning in the Standard Oil company, one who, if the testimony of nearly a dozen responsible men and the decision of two courts is accepted as evidence, is president of a company bearing his name, which has been guilty of forgery, fraud and perjury

"The election of such a reformer would be a step backward and would retard for a decade the movements inaugurated by the Prohibition party, and by it partially carried to a successful consummation We are unwilling as a party to have our work for reform thus sidetracked and despoiled by a pretender and hence our protest."

A Bible Courtship.

A young gentleman at church conceived a most sudden and violent passion for a young lady in the next pew and felt desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but, the place not suiting a formal declaration, the exigency suggested the following plan: He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible, open, with a pin stuck in the following text, second epistle of John, verse 5: "And now I beseech thee, lady, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another." She returned it with the following, second chapter of Ruth, verse 10: "Then she fell on her face and bowed herself to the ground and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take notice of me, seeing I am a stranger?" He returned the book, pointing to verse 12 of the third epistle of John, "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face." From the above interview the marriage took place the following week.—Scottish American.

The Geese Won.

An English gentleman once laid a wager with George IV. that geese would beat turkeys in a race. The king, thinking that such a wager was already as good as won, willingly made the bet, and the gentleman was left to choose time and place and distance. Being well acquainted with the habits of the birds he accordingly chose for the time the evening, just before sunset, and for the place the road outside the city walls and a mile for the distance. The time came and each appeared with his flock of birds and the race began. Long ere the end came the sunset and immediately, true to their instincts, as soon as the sun had quite disappeared all the turkeys flew up into the nearest tree to roost, and no persuasion could induce them to budge an inch farther, and the geese, which had been slowly toddling on behind, quietly cackled in—the winners.

Damon and Pythias

[Original.]

"I am happy to meet you, Mr. King, though I know you consider that I have robbed you during your absence of your bosom friend; consequently you are anything but happy to meet me."

"Really"—

"Don't tell any polite falsehoods. It will do no good. I know of the devotion between you and Earle that you expected on your return to find that he still belonged to you, that instead you find in me a wedge between you and him—that you are prepared to hate me."

"I assure you you wrong me. On the contrary"—

"Here is the proof. In this letter, written to Earle as soon as you heard of his marriage, you say"—

"Please don't read it I was a fool to write such stuff. Of course Earle had a perfect right to marry, and had I been in his place I should have"—

"Never mind these bits of conventional flattery; they will do no good. I am going to try and capture my enemy. Earle has just left for the Pacific coast, to be gone dear knows how long. Meanwhile I am going to try to take his place with his best friend. I shall play Damon, with a view to making you my Pythias Earle went away crushed at your cruel letter. I promised that when he returned he should find we three a trio, though one of us is a woman."

Earle Warren was absent ten weeks, and the day before his return there was another conversation between those he had left behind.

"You are my evil genius."

"Your evil genius?" she asked in a tone far from indicating that she was offended.

"Yes, I came home expecting to find my friend. He had passed into your possession. Then under pretext of making a trio of friends you have made me the lover of my friend's wife."

The lady smiled.

"You have made a wreck of me, and now you laugh at me."

"Men have died, but not for love."

"Honorable men have done dishonorable things for love."

"I would delight to make you turn against your friend for me I should know myself to be loved as I wish to be loved."

"You are a devil."

"You say I have made you one. We are well mated."

"It only remains to consummate a double villainy. Will you fly with me before Earle returns?"

She turned away with bent head. He wondered at this first display of conscience she had made since they met.

"Now you have your victim within your toils," he said, "you hesitate to crush him."

"Come tomorrow night at 10. Earle returns a little later. If I have made you bad I will be as bad as you"

At the appointed hour the next night Stanton King drove in a carriage to the house of Earle Warren. It was Damon going to rob Pythias of his wife. He knew that a woman who would play such a part must be a very devil, but it seemed the greater the devil the greater her power over him. He drove up to her door just as a town clock struck the hour of 10 Jumping from his carriage, he ran up to the door. It was opened by the lady herself.

"Come in," she said. "We have plenty of time."

"But I expected you would be dressed for the journey."

"The journey to the realms of Satan?"

"If there were a worse place I would follow you there."

A sound of wheels without and a carriage drove up behind the one that was waiting. Some one alighted and came up the steps. The lady who was to run away with her husband's friend threw herself on a sofa and buried her face in the cushions. A man entered and stood for a moment looking at the couple He was Earle Warren Following him was a young and beautiful woman.

"Stanton," he said gayly.

Stanton King reeled and was about to fall when his friend caught him in his arms.

"Stanton, old man, it's all right. We've put up a job on you. That's not my wife; it's my wife's cousin, Emma Steele. The women did it I told them it would be a shame, but they wanted to make a quartet of us all. This is my wife. Ellen, this is my best friend, Stanton King You don't have to elope, old man. You shall be married from this house."

King turned and looked at the woman on the sofa. She arose and cast a quick glance at him a glance to know if she would be punished for what she had done. King started to leave the house. At the door he turned for a last glance and saw the woman who had deceived him ready to sink back pale and trembling on the sofa. Rushing to her, he caught her in his arms.

There was a clapping of hands on the part of Mr. and the real Mrs. Warren, and a shower of congratulations, mingled with taunts on the part of the latter. Miss Steele, disengaging herself from King, held up her hands deprecatingly and said:

"I know that I alone could have made a villain of this honorable man. We have succeeded in our scheme, and God forgive me for my part in it. I shall atone for it with a life of devotion."

And she did.

They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. Some Theories And a Bear Trap

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Uncle Peter Scott, farmer on the outskirts of the village of Hillside, had lost his good wife, and his daughter Jennie kept house for him. He had got to be fifty years old and fluency, when she had got to be twenty and was called one of the nicest girls in Adams county.

Tom Barlow, the youngest of the village merchants, agreed with all others. He had driven out to see Jennie on half a dozen occasions on Sunday afternoons, and it was whispered around that a marriage would come of it. The father had scratched his head and said nothing, but in his own mind he had regarded it as a good match.

All was going well when an interruption suddenly occurred. Mr Barlow dealt in hoes, rakes and shovels as well as in dry goods and groceries. Uncle Peter bought a hoe of him and started into the cornfield one morning to make the dirt fly. The hoe pleased him, the air was balmy and the corn was knee high and still growing. He was humming to himself and wondering how long before he would lose Jennie when he pulled over a sod with his hoe and caught sight of a big fat mole underneath.

The life or death of that mole had little to do with the future prosperity of Adams county, but Uncle Peter jumped in with intent to slaughter. He made three or four blows with the hoe and finally one tremendous blow. The mole was immolated, but at the same time the handle of the hoe was broken and the old man fell forward and plowed his nose into the ground. He got up mad. He was mad at the mole, the hoe and himself, and he jumped up and down and used cuss words.

One does not remain mad at himself very long. He finds some one else to blame for the whole thing. In this case Uncle Peter put the calamity on the shoulders of Mr. Barlow. He had sold him a hoe handle that was weak in the back—sold it with intent to defraud and deceive. Uncle Peter had sold short tons of hay more than once but when any one cheated him he looked upon it as a wrong to all humanity. He was near the roadside fence when he massacred the mole, and he had just got the dirt out of his mouth after the fall when a man he knew came driving along in his buggy.

He naturally asked what was the matter, and the old man cut loose. He called the merchant a cheat, fraud and swindler and vowed by the whiskers of his ancestors that he would never, never buy aught more of him. He wanted his words repeated, and they were.

When the father went up to the house after another hoe and the daughter asked what was the matter he had more to say about the merchant and something particular to say to her. He made more fuss about that broken hoe handle than the county commissioners had in building a bridge over Goose creek, and he ended off with:

"Now, you gal, listen to me. If that swindler ever sets foot on my land ag'in I'll c-r-u-s-h him as I would a a a mouse!"

Jennie argued and protested and tried to soothe, but the father was obdurate. He told her of the message he had sent to town, and she wrote a few lines of excuse to Mr. Barlow and sent them by a passing boy. That afternoon several persons had several theories to advance to themselves.

Uncle Peter held to his anger. His theory was that Mr. Barlow would drive out in the evening and try to get speech with Jennie and seek to excuse his disgraceful conduct in selling for 25 cents a hoe not worth a dime.

Jennie's theory was that the merchant would drive out with half a dozen hoes in his buggy and tell her father to take them all, but she feared the result. The old man was mad all through, and it always took him at least a week to get over one of his fits. Old Mrs. Davis, who lived just across the road, heard something about the broken hoe, and her theory was that there would be a row of some sort and that she would be there to hear and to see.

The merchant didn't have any particular theory. He simply made up his mind to drive out to Uncle Peter's and tell him to come in and help himself to hoes, rakes and shovels without stint.

Nothing further of moment happened during the day. It was after supper when Uncle Peter was milking the brindle cow that he got another theory. It might have worked well had not his daughter observed him half an hour later oiling up the springs of a bear trap that had hung in the barn for the last twenty years. Then she got a new theory. Her father hoped and intended that some one should walk into that trap. It must be the man who sold him the deceptive hoe that he was laying for. Old Mrs. Davis kept her eye on the Scott homestead between sundown and dark, and, though no tragedy took place, she turned to her husband and said:

"Andrew, something is goin' to happen. I feel it in my bones. I've got a theory that there's goin' to be awful doin's across the road tonight."

Father and daughter sat on the porch till the clock struck 9, and then the girl arose and entered the house to go to bed. That was his chance. He jumped down on the grass and ran for his bear trap and set it just inside the gate and ten minutes later was winding up the clock with an innocent expression of countenance calculated to deceive the cat.

"Now, why did father linger behind?" asked Jennie of herself as she went upstairs, and, poking her head out of a front window, she saw him engaged in some nefarious business on the path—something that she investigated fifteen minutes later and dragged to one side on the lawn.

The merchant had been detained. He had also forgotten that farmers retired to their beds when the hens went to roost. It was 10 o'clock when he came driving t. Jennie heard him coming and walked down the road to meet him. Knowing her father as she did, she knew that a present of a dozen new hoes that night would not suffice to soothe his injured feelings. It would be best to notify Mr. Barlow of this fact and turn him back and say good night.

At about the hour mentioned above Uncle Peter roused up out of a doze with a new theory. It was to the effect that some lightning rod men might come along in the night and seek to arouse the house for lodgings and step into that waiting bear trap. He was about to get up when he remembered that a man of lightning had cheated him out of $10 five years before, and he therefore decided not to budge. He had just come to this decision when old Mrs. Davis said:

"Andrew, I'm goin' to get up and go over to Scott's."

"What fur?" he dreamily asked.

"I've got a theory that Uncle Peter has hung himself in the wood shed."

"Nonsense!"

"Don't say 'nonsense' to me. I never had a theory yet that didn't turn out right. I'm goin' right over there, and if you hear me yell out you'll know what has happened."

She partly dressed and left the house. Jennie and Mr. Barlow and the horse and buggy were not so far away that she could not have made them out had she been less occupied with her theory, but as it was they escaped her notice. The wood shed to every well regulated house is in the rear. It was so in the case of the Scott home. To reach it old Mrs. Davis had to leave the straight path, and she hadn't made above ten steps when there was a scream and a long drawn yell to freeze the blood of all hearers. Uncle Peter heard it as he was beginning to dream of broken hoe handles and fat moles, and he jumped out of bed.

Old Mr. Davis heard it as he dozed and wondered about theories, and out of bed he came with his hair trying to stand on end. Jennie and Mr Barlow heard it and started forward with exclamations of alarm, and thus it happened that the four reached old Mrs. Davis at about the same time. She had been caught in the bear trap, of course. In leaving the path she had stepped fairly into it, and as the jaws came together she felt, as she said afterward, that the last day had come and she was ready to sail away.

There was an exciting time for the next ten minutes. The poor old woman was frightened half to death, and a good deal bruised by the teeth of the trap, and while she was being carried across the road her husband was announcing his determination to have satisfaction under the law. Uncle Peter realized that his theory had failed, and Jennie and Mr. Barlow had been discovered conspiring, as it were. It wasn't until the victim had been put to bed, her hurts attended to by a doctor and her husband calmed down by a promise that the right thing should be done that Uncle Peter turned on the young folks and demanded:

"Well, what you got to say about all this?"

"Nothing, father," answered Jennie.

"Nothing, Mr Scott," added the merchant.

"Wall, I dunno as I have, either," observed the mole killer, as he jogged into the house and left the others at the gate to talk things over.

One of the Family.

"Are you the editor that takes in the society news?" inquired the caller, an undersized man, with a timid, appealing look on his face.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man at the desk. "I can take in any kind of news. What have you?"

"Why, it's this way," said the caller, lowering his voice; "My wife gave a swell party last night, and I'm willing to pay to have this report of the affair put in your paper."

"We don't charge anything for publishing society notes," observed the young man at the desk, taking the proffered manuscript and looking it over.

"That's all right," was the reply. "You don't understand. I wrote this up myself, and I put in a line or two that says, 'Mr. Halfstick assisted his distinguished wife in receiving the guests.' That's the way I want it to go in, and I don't care if it costs $5 a line. I want my friends to know, by George, that I still belong to the family!"

Not Soon Enough.

A man who is now one of the leading members of the Stock Exchange was rather wild in his youth, which is not an exclusive characteristic of this member of the Stock Exchange. But this man was a favorite with his mother and generally called on her to help him out of his scrapes, and she usually responded freely, even lavishly. On one occasion, however, when his demands had been especially frequent and extravagant, it was with considerable trepidation that, on discovering himself "the morning after" in a distant city and picked as clean as a new fledged sparrow, he penned the following heart moving appeal, to be sent C. O. D.:

"Send $50 and save disgrace."

His worst fears were realized when, an hour later, he received the reply from his mother, "Too late."—New York Tribune.
